

A memorable and timeless space for clients and guests

Introducing vintage pieces into a new elegant workplace

PARLEE MCLAWS LLP

The relocated premises of a historic law firm (established 1889) occupies two floors of a downtown Calgary office tower. The 30,000 square feet previously occupied by another law firm incorporates design updates with an understated quality and timelessness that underpins and projects the firm's brand. Incorporating a client-friendly, sophisticated and layered residential aesthetic, the renovations convey both the sense of quiet solidity of this 130-year old firm with the engagement and creativity of a leading, growing firm.

Lighting and furnishings were selected to create the impression of a collection carefully curated over time. Old contrasts with new: an overdyed area carpet fabricated from vintage remnants and 1940s Seguso table lamps, combine with new custom furniture and architectural classics. The new premises convey an elegant, comfortable, professional attitude that is memorable to clients and guests, providing the firm with flexibility, and the technology tools to support a contemporary workforce.
